ROBERTS
WESLEYAN COLLEGE

What does stalking look like?

Stalking is a behavioral pattern that can include physical, psychological, sexual, economic, and emotional abuse, perpetrated by a person.

Stalking can include, but is not limited to:

- Following subject wherever they go
- Sending unwanted gifts, letters, cards, or e-mails
- Monitoring subjects computer/phone use
- Driving or hanging out at your home, school, or work
- Threatening to hurt you, your family, friends, or pets
- Spreading rumors or posting information about you on the internet, in a common place, or by word of mouth
- Any behavior that seeks to control, intimidate, or coerce subject

The More You Know

If You Are a Victim

What Not To Do

- Simply address the symptom (ie: changing your number)
- Assume stalker will get bored
- Assume stalker is predictable
- Don't make it about you

What To Do

- Work with an advocate or campus safety to develop safety plan
- Inform stalker the behavior is unwanted
- Create a Plan
- Treat all threats as legitimate and inform campus safety or law enforcement
- Save all correspondence
